Get Rolling on a Better Commute

May is Bike Month, and Southern California's transportation agencies are gearing up to help you get into two-wheeled commuting. Whether you ride all the way to work—or just as far as the nearby transit stop—bicycling is a great way to get fit, save money, and help the environment.

Here's what's happening...

- Your fare is free when you bring your bike on board Metrolink and VCTC Intercity Bus during Bike Week May 16-20, and bike or helmet on Metro Rail and buses on Bike to Work Day, Thursday, May 19.
- Join in on any of dozens of group rides throughout the month, or stop at a hosted "pit stop" on your ride into work for a rest and refreshments.
- OCTA Bike Rally and ride is May 12, 7:30 a.m. at the Orange Metrolink station.
- Metro Bike Night at Union Station is May 27 at 5:30 p.m., with live music, food trucks and a bike fashion show.

Plus you may be able to win prizes when you make the pledge to bike during Bike Month or post about your bike ride on social media.

A Train to the Beach

Soon you'll be able to ride rail to Los Angeles' west side when the second phase of Metro's Expo Line opens on May 20.

The extension continues the Expo Line 6.6 miles from where it currently ends in Culver City to Santa Monica, adding seven stations and providing a much-needed alternative to the congested Santa Monica Freeway.

The trip on the entire Expo Line between 7th/Metro Center in downtown Los Angeles to the station near the beach is expected to take 46 minutes.
